

Alec Stewart OBE

The Most Capped English Cricketer of all Time - in both Test Matches and One Day Internationals

CSA CELEBRITY SPEAKERS

Alec Stewart OBE is the most capped England cricketer of all time, affectionately known as the 'gaffer' of English cricket. He works as a regular cricket analyst on Radio 5 live and across Sky Sports and the BBC's cricket coverage. He also remains close to Surrey cricket club as an ambassador and is a principle ambassador for Vodafone and their sponsorship with the English cricket team. He has also appeared on Sky One's The Match.

"England Cricket Legend"

In detail

Alec took over the England captaincy in 1998 and promptly led the side to its first major series win for 12 years. After 20 years in County and International cricket his final match was a very high profile one at his home ground The Oval against South Africa in 2003. His most memorable performance may have been when he thundered two centuries during England's storming of 'fortress' Bridgetown in 1993-94. He will go down as one of England's greatest ever all-rounders. As a regular pundit on cricket shows, a popular player for written and broadcast media, Alec is very comfortable in front of the camera.
