Howard Putnam will get your organization and you "Up To Speed"

In detail

Howard entered the airline business for Capital Airlines at age 17. Capital was soon merged into United and Howard held thirteen different positions before being named Group Vice President of Marketing for United Airlines in 1976. In 1978 he became President and CEO of fledgling Southwest Airlines in Dallas, TX. Howard led the visioning process at Southwest as well as further developing the "fun" culture and excellent customer service that South is still known for today. In 1981, Howard was recruited by the board of directors of Braniff International to come aboard as CEO and save and/or restructure the financially failing airline. He was the first airline CEO to successfully take a major carrier into, through and out of chapter 11. Braniff flew again in 1984.
